Relationships are the centre of human lives. Hence the following questions arise:
What characterizes a healthy relationship?
How do relationships become destructive?
Can healthy relationships be fostered and destructive ones healed?

The “constellation of the intention” is an especially suitable method for showing the quality of relationships and shedding light on their depth. It is predominantly traumatic experiences that make healthy relationships impossible, and that cause destructive forms of relationships.

The 2nd International Conference of the Association for Promoting Healthy Human Autonomy e. V. offers the opportunity to take a closer look at different forms of relationship (between partners, parents and children, siblings, or between work colleagues). It may be possible to do a personal constellation in one of the workshops on offer during the conference. A special focus of this conference is early traumatic experiences before, during and after birth.
